

I want to be smarter, book ONE

This workbook is designed for fourth and fifth grade students who need extra practice in multiplication, geometry, the four operations, place value, identifying patterns, evaluating, dialogue, and creative writing. This is NOT your traditional, boring collection of I already did that and I don't want to do this. These problems are new, created by me with a blend of the world of the Gifted and the world of the regular student (where I taught for twenty years). These problems are ideal for tutoring or independent work, during vacation or on weekends or rainy days when they complain about being bored. A variety of math and language arts activities will help to prepare your child for the next grade: add, subtract, multiply and divide one-digit numbers; complete a sequence, pattern, or analogy; identify what doesn't belong based on odd vs even numbers, single vs double-digit numbers; identify how many circles, triangles, or rectangles are in a design (overlapping); solve toothpick (matchstick) problems; hangman with frequently misspelled words; evaluate between two choices (e.g., Is it better for a dog to have a bath every day or to exercise every day); expanded form and word name for three-digit numbers; multiples, common multiples, and the least common multiple; imaginative dialogue (e.g., what do you say when you discover a ladybug reading a book and she speaks to you). If you need extra work for vacation, then this is it. If you want extra help for weekends or a trip, then this is it. And if you want more, then smile, because this is one book in a series of four.
